MCDC purchases Boundary Trails Place

By Lorne Stelmach

The change of ownership of a property that houses an important collection of health care and other services in Morden is being heralded as a vital step for the community.

The former ownership group of Boundary Trails Place, which is centred in and around the former Morden hospital building, recently completed the sale of the property to the Morden Community Development Corporation (MCDC).

Both parties saw it as a good fit given the importance of what all is there, including not only Menzies Medical Centre but other essential services like the adult education centre.

"When the opportunity arose this fall, we unanimously as a group felt this was something we needed to take on ... to protect the future of some really vital health and education services in our community," said Chris Willsey, board chairperson of the MCDC.

"It's a critical part of this community. It's a cornerstone for important community services and for health care," noted Dr. David Goerz, representing the former ownership group.

He recalled the formation of the medical centre in 1963 and the medical staff who made it happen for the good of the community, and then how in the early 2000s, when the new regional hospital was opening, people like Dr. Bob Menzies and John Wiens recognized the importance of having the opportunity to take over the old hospital building.

"We continued to move forward, but it was always with the plan of what was best for the community," said Goerz.

He noted there had been a few opportunities in recent years to pass on the property to various outside interests, but they were glad when MCDC stepped forward.

"We came to the consensus that this would be a good transition ... this was a good thing for the community."

In conjunction with the sale of Boundary Trails Place, the former ownership group donated $300,000 to the Minnewasta Golf and Country Club for its new clubhouse before it was damaged by fire earlier this month. Above: Group reps David Goerz (left) and John Wiens (right) with Rod Wolfe, representing the Minnewasta board.

MCDC recognizes the critical importance of maintaining this property's role in supporting health care services and ensuring its stability for the benefit of the community, said Willsey.

"Doctor recruitment and retention are top priorities for our community, and the preservation of affordable, high-quality space for health care providers is essential," he said. "By acquiring Boundary Trails Place, we are taking proactive steps to ensure that our medical clinic and health care services remain accessible and well-supported for years to come."

"It was such a vision of that former ownership group to assemble that ... it's unparalleled. Where else do you find something like that," Willsey added. "We felt the importance of how that needs to continue into the future. Healthy communities need healthy services, and we're all about helping the community of Morden grow and prosper."

In conjunction with the sale and transition, the former ownership group made a $300,000 donation to the Minnewasta Golf and Country Club—a gift that was announced at the clubhouse opening gala New Year's Eve just days before the fire that heavily damaged the property.

"It was important to us to pay it forward," Goerz said. "We thought it was a very good way for us to help carry on the legacy."

Morden Festival of the Arts registration deadline nears

By Lorne Stelmach

The final deadline is nearing to register for the Morden Festival of the Arts.

The deadline for registrations for all festival categories is Jan. 24.

The Morden Festival of the Arts is a volunteer-run registered charity that provides a venue for student and adult performance, instruction, and adjudication in the areas of band, strings, sacred, piano, vocal/choral and French and English speech arts.

The aim is to foster and promote continued interest, growth, and development of talent within the arts. In order to encourage youth to share their love of the arts, the festival strives to keep entry fees as low as possible.

Piano, strings, sacred and vocal registrations are generally done through a student's private music teacher, but forms and submission details are available online at mordenfestivalofthearts.com for all festival categories.

This year's festival—the event's 50th—takes place with sessions running through March and April.

Head to the website for more details or contact Erika Dyck at 204-823-0208 or mordenfestivalofthearts@gmail.com.

South Central Regional Library marking its 60th anniversary

50/50 fundraising raffle tickets on sale now

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The South Central Regional Library kicked off its 60th anniversary celebrations last week with the launch of a 50/50 it hopes will help it tackle a few special projects across its five branches.

The jackpot draw will take place the morning of Feb. 25, with the winner splitting the pot with the library. An early bird draw for a $250 prize will take place Jan. 20.

“Each branch has their own pet project, so these funds will be the start for those projects,” explains Cathy Ching, SCRL’s director of library services.

The Altona branch is planning to add a much-needed extension for its front desk area, Manitou is looking to update its patron seating area with comfortable couches and chairs, Miami is working with the Miami Railway Station Museum to create a joint green space with walking paths and gardens, Morden wants to renovate its meeting room to make the space more usable for programming and community rentals, and the Winkler branch is going to add a coffee corner for patrons to enjoy.

Tickets start at $5 each and are available online at www.scrl60.com/events.html.

The library has no set goal for the 50/50, but every single dollar will help, Ching says, noting they’ll also be using some of the funds to support a big prize raffle they’re planning to run throughout the rest of the year. Tickets for that will go on sale at a gala quiz night being planned for March.

“It will be a formal, semi-formal quiz night,” Ching explains, noting they expect to have space for about 40 teams, though those details are still being hammered out. “It will be at the Access Event Centre in Morden and that’s where we’re going to launch the second raffle.”

Prizes in the works include packages revolving around travel (possibly with a Via Rail voucher), lawn and garden, home improvement, glitz and glamour, and more.

That draw will take place come fall, which is when the library officially turns 60.

SIXTY YEARS OF COMMUNITY SERVICE

SCRL got its start as the Winkler and Morden Regional Library in 1965. Both communities officially celebrated the grand opening of their respective branches in October of that year.

Within just four days of its opening, Morden’s library had 214 members signed up. The small collection size meant patrons were limited to just two books at a time to start.

The branch has called a few locations in downtown Morden home through the years, including the clocktower building that now houses the art gallery. It moved into its current building down the street in 1996, expanding into adjacent space in 2002.

The Winkler library, meanwhile, got its start in an old Manitoba Telephone System building on Mountain Ave. In 1981 it moved into the Winkler Civic Centre, where it remained until the spacious Winkler Centennial Library opened across the street in 2006.

The branch’s books were carried over by a human chain of over 1,000 volunteers. They managed to move 40,000 books in just two days.

These two libraries thrived and grew through the ‘60s and ‘70s, eventually becoming know as the South Central Regional Library when the RM of Stanley joined the funding network in 1976.

In 1988, the Altona library joined the Winkler and Morden branches. The library had previously existed as books in storage in a local resident’s

Central Station gearing up to mark Poverty Awareness Month

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Central Station Community Centre intends to “bring poverty to light” next month as it marks Poverty Awareness Month in Winkler.

They have three big events on the schedule designed to foster discussion about the needs in our community and raise awareness about the work being done by Central Station and its partners, says social impact director Krista Rempel.

“Poverty often is not as visible here as it might be in more urban areas,” she says. “We want to bring it into the light, because we think everything starts, every solution starts, with awareness. The more people that we can get involved in solution-making and action, the better.

“We believe that our community is very self-sustaining and very creative and very empathetic. And so we know that there’s lots to be done if we can get the community involved and aware of what the actual issues are, what are some of the underlying causes and effects of the poverty that we’re seeing.”

The community centre will kick things off with the launch of its social impact report on Thursday, Feb. 6 at 3 p.m.

Central Station staff have been compiling data on exactly how local initiatives are addressing poverty and the significant return on investment for the community. The report will provide a powerful narrative on how collective efforts are driving change, Rempel says.

“How many transportation events have happened? How many muffins have we baked in a year? Everything that we’ve done, we want to put a number on it,” she explains. “Some of those items we’re also putting a value on so that we can see what the cost to the community would be.

“And then the other big focus that we have is collaborations. We want to show how many people or how many agencies are working together in the community to create solutions for people,” Rempel says. “Some of the numbers are quite surprising, and I think people are going to be quite interested to see that a lot of the work in poverty is being done by people already, so we’re really just interested in pumping it up a notch.

Next up, on Thursday, Feb. 20, local leaders will participate in a Poverty Simulation designed to immerse them in the challenges of living on a low income.

It’s often an eye-opening experience for participants, Rempel says.

“I think what always surprises people is how complex it is,” she says of the factors that might contribute to an individual living in poverty, and the uphill battle they often face to overcome those challenges. “There’s so many stigmas and typical scenarios that people think have led to someone being in poverty, and that’s just often not the case.

“What really is enlightening for people is learning that it’s a complex jigsaw puzzle. If you don’t have one right piece, then it leads to the next piece not fitting. And then you’re scrambling and you’re just living in a constant mode of survival rather than actually being able to devote time to bettering yourself.”

The simulation is quite effective at illustrating the day-to-day life of someone struggling to make end’s meet.

“People often come out of it very frazzled at the end of it because while they’re very capable and they’re very intelligent ... none of those things help at the end of the day because poverty is holding them down,” Rempel says.

The simulation is open to anyone who wants to experience it. Contact Rempel via email to krista@winklercentralstation.ca if you’d like to sign-up.

Finally, the month wraps up with the Light Up the Streets walk on Saturday, Feb. 22.

It’s a new name for the third annual walk, but the purpose behind it remains the same.

“This year we really wanted to capture our theme, which is bringing poverty to light,” Rempel explains.

The walk will set out from Central Station at 5 p.m. and take participants on a three kilometre route through the city and back to the community centre, where they’ll be treated to a hot supper.

Everyone is welcome to take part, either individually or as a team, and collect pledges in support of Central Station’s programming. Volunteers are also needed to help ensure things go off without a hitch.

“You can walk, you can donate, volunteer—however you want to be involved, we’ll find a way for you to be involved,” Rempel says.

“I think it’s a really visible way to show the community what we’re doing. And we’re hoping the whole community will join us,” she says, noting that even if you can’t walk yourself you’re welcome to come show your support by cheering on participants as they make their way through town.

To register, head online to winklercentralstation.ca.

Central Station is hoping to raise at least $70,000 in pledges from this year’s walk. Last year’s event raised over $80,000.

Morden council welcomes new youth member

By Lorne Stelmach

Serving as youth council member for the City of Morden is another exciting step in the journey for Aqeelah Daibu.

Her family just moved here from Nigeria a year and a half ago, and it is not surprising to the Grade 11 student that she would get involved in the community.

"I think it all starts when I was young because I remember, growing up, my parents used to take me and my siblings to orphanage homes ... places where we could help people who were facing challenges. I think that is where it came from," said Daibu.

During her term as youth council member, she will participate in each council meeting and have an opportunity to report anything from school and student activities to whatever priorities and ideas she has to offer to council.

"One of the things that made me go for the youth council position is because I understand the importance of speaking up and representing the youth and other voices," Daibu said. "I felt joining the council would be a good opportunity for me to do that."

She also wants to bring the perspective of being a newcomer to the community to the council table.

"One of the things I hope to contribute as the youth council member is to show how diverse the youth are in Morden," said Daibu, who noted there are so many youth here from so many different places around the world now.

"I want to use the youth council member as an opportunity to show and represent that diversity," she said, noting one idea she has is to have a cultural day at Morden Collegiate where "the students of the school could dress up in whatever cultural attire ... that would be to showcase where they come from in the world."

Mayor Nancy Penner observed council has been fortunate to have a remarkable selection of youth council members in recent years.

"We have had very dedicated, engaged and interested candidates to be the youth rep on council," she said. "This year is no different. She attended our meeting in December, and I think she was very pleased to be part of the team."

Penner appreciates that Daibu represents the diversity of the community today.

"She comes so highly qualified in terms of her involvement not only in school but in the broader community, so we're very pleased to have her on council," the mayor said, noting Daibu is not only involved on student council but also with the Youth in Philanthropy group. "She is such a well rounded student and involved in volunteering ... it just shows her commitment to being involved in the community."

Penner is absolutely sold on the value of having a youth council member. "It keeps council in the loop with what's happening with youth in our community. She provides feedback with what's happening in the school," she said. "It's a valuable opportunity for council."

Santa Paws collection drive a big hit for PVHS

By Lorne Stelmach

A holiday season initiative to help collect supplies for the Pembina Valley Humane Society was successful again for a fourth straight year.

Donations poured in for the 2024 Santa Paws campaign, and shelter manager Jennifer Young stressed that kind of response makes a real difference for the shelter as it enters a new year.

"It is amazing. The generosity of the community blows me away every year," she said. "It's surprising, and it's so nice to see. People are so generous, and some come in numerous times. There are some people who come in, bring a few things, and will say, 'What else do you need?'"

There's a wide range of every day kinds of supplies that are needed at the regional animal shelter in Morden, and the support can take some of the cost burden off by providing some of these supplies for at least part of the year. They can then instead use their funds to pay for animals to be spayed and neutered and other treatment and care costs.

"It helps so much obviously to take the financial burden off of us in having to purchase these things we need," said Young. "I won't need to purchase any food for awhile. I won't need to purchase any gloves and bags and things like that because people were so generous with what they did donate. It was quite amazing."

Young noted another factor that comes into play as well is their effort to give shelter animals a break by having them in foster homes over the holidays.

"We had so many animals go out to foster homes for the holidays that some food was coming in and going right out with the fosters ... so we weren't able to keep a good count, but that's okay," she said. "We had enough success with the amount of donations that we couldn't fit it all under the tree or around it, and then it was going right out for a good cause."

Overall, she said it shows how so many people care deeply about animals.

"What we are noticing is that it is increasing every year in terms of the number of donations and the number of people ... whether it's cash or supplies, we're getting a lot of new donors for different things."

"We're also getting a lot of new fosters to take in animals during the holidays. We ended up with only two dogs and our shelter cats over the two weeks of holidays because so many people were offering to take in some animals," she said. "That obviously helps the animals ... it also helps the volunteers to be able to get a break during the holidays."

They are always open to receiving not only cans of wet cat and dog food but also specifically kitten food as well as clumping cat litter and even laundry and cleaning supplies. Monetary donations are also welcome.

The eleventh province

Imagine if you will, a time in the not-so-distant future when you are no longer a Canadian but an American living in the state of Canada, a so-called 51st state.

What a terrifying prospect to even consider. It would be like going to sleep one night and waking up in the Twilight Zone.

A few years ago, one would scoff at the very suggestion of such a future, but now with Donald Trump having a great old time gleefully trolling Canadians with regular social media posts on the subject we are forced to at least imagine such a ridiculous, if far-fetched, future.

Of course, we cannot give Trump the entirety of the credit for this idea. The foundation of this thought rests solidly in the American colonial imperialist idea of Manifest Destiny. Any Canadian educational institution worth its salt has taught us all about this concept, but here's a refresher just in case.

Manifest Destiny is a political, ideological form of missionary evangelism that arose around 1844 where the American state and people believe it was critical to spread the light of the American way of life throughout North America. The concept hinges on the belief that there is no better form of life than the American way, an idea which is called American Exceptionalism.

Proponents of the concept strongly encouraged the annexation of what is now Texas along with territories in Canada and Mexico.

Of course, those of us with eyes to see and ears to hear know these concepts are nonsense and that among all the nations on earth Canada stands near the top in terms of quality of life, protection for the oppressed, and social infrastructure.

I am not entirely without credibility when I talk about these things, having lived in the United States (Florida) for years when I worked in the IT sector.

We enjoyed certain things about the U.S. We appreciated the low cost to build our home. Taxes were lower. Food and gas prices were also relatively low.

Liberals are putting their interests ahead of Canadians

The Liberal government is rotting from the inside out, consumed by a decade of corruption.

In a last-ditch move to avoid a non-confidence vote, Justin Trudeau has shut down Parliament, a feeble attempt to delay the inevitable. The Prime Minister is detached from reality, while his party scrambles to find a replacement. They know the end is near, but still can't put the country ahead of their own survival.

Let's be clear: whoever takes over the Liberal leadership will do nothing to alter the disastrous course Trudeau has set. For nearly ten years, the Liberals stood by as Trudeau raised taxes, inflated housing prices, allowed the national debt to explode, and watched crime run rampant. Now, with re-election hopes fading, they've decided it's time to cut him loose.

They want us to wait while the same people who created this mess choose a new leader from their fractured ranks. The Liberals will never change. Their interests are too deeply entrenched to be swayed by the suffering of Canadians. The future of our country is just a pawn in their game of self-preservation.

Canada is on the brink. We face a trade war with the United States that could cripple our economy. We have a drug epidemic that has claimed over 47,000 lives. Prices are soaring, crime is rampant, and the Canadian dollar is sinking. This is the product of Liberal rule. This is their legacy. And now they expect us to believe they can fix what they've broken?

Enough. Enough of their lies and hollow promises. The Liberals have exhausted every ounce of credibility. They have failed this country, and their time is over.

Canada deserves better. We deserve

PVLIP's annual celebration is Feb. 5

Linh Huynh to provide keynote address

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Pembina Valley Local Immigration Partnership is highlighting the successes of the past year and sharing its plans for the future at the fifth annual Connecting Cultures and Communities Celebration next month.

The gathering takes place in Mordean at St. Paul's United Church (335 Thornhill St.) on Wednesday, Feb. 5 from 6:30-9 p.m. Light refreshments will be served.

It's a chance to network with long-time and new community members alike while learning more about how PVLIP is working with its partners to make for more welcoming and inclusive communities across southern Manitoba.

"It's really the culmination of our last five years," shares coordinator Elaine Burton Saindon. The agency recently wrapped up work on its first multi-year action plan and has drafted a new one to cover 2025-2030.

The celebration will include highlights from the past few years and then outline what PVLIP hopes to achieve with its four new action priorities. Details on those priorities will be released that night, but Burton Saindon explains they continue with PVLIP's mission to help municipalities and businesses improve the integration of immigrants to the Pembina Valley and strengthen the region's ability to better address the needs of newcomers.

"We don't deal with immigration specifically, but we do work with the impacts of immigration more directly," she explains. "We understand the needs and gaps in a community or organization and then we work collaboratively with multiple partners as to what's the best solution for this problem?"

That work has led to the creation of things like PVLIP's comprehensive toolkit for communities, businesses, and individuals to use to foster a greater sense of belonging.

"That's one of the things that answered a lot of questions for a lot of people and in a lot of places," Burton Saindon observes. "We all have the right to feel connected and to feel that we belong in our community."

While raising awareness of the work of PVLIP remains a big part of the annual celebration, Burton Saindon is excited that, for the first time, the 2025 event will also feature a keynote speaker that's sure to inspire.

Linh Huynh is a professional speaker, author, educator, and "extreme non-athlete" who has nonetheless competed in numerous marathons and ultra-marathons around the world, including the Antarctic Ice Marathon and the North Pole Mara-

What I didn't appreciate were the reminders of how different the culture was. Like when I went for a meeting with Compaq in Texas and encountered a sign at the front door that said, "Handguns are not permitted inside of the building." A stark reminder that I was no longer in Canada.

It was also frightening to think about the cost of healthcare for those not fortunate enough to have insurance provided through work like I did. A simple visit to the emergency room at my nearby hospital was $500 minimum, even if you only walked out with a bandage.

According to International Citizens Insurance, costs are high. Need breast cancer treatment? Prepare to pay anywhere between $20,000 to $100,000. Want an MRI? You pay anywhere from $400 to $3,000. Wander into the local walk-in clinic? That'll be $130-$200. Want to have a child? The cost of a birth without complications is between $7,000-$17,000. Need a heart bypass? You'll spend between $30,000 to more than $200,000. The list goes ever onward.

Frankly I think the U.S. would be better off as the eleventh province of Canada. Think of what we could do with some of that $820 billion spent annually on defence alone?

It seems unlikely given the direction of American culture these days, but we could at least try to make #11thprovince go viral as a hashtag on social media. Who knows, maybe we can spread the Canadian gospel of universal healthcare and a strong social conscience throughout our neighbour to the south.

Of course, one of the biggest values for Americans would be getting to travel abroad with the Canadian flag, passport, and identity, but I'm not sure they could handle the shock of being almost universally loved.

a government that puts the people first, not its own interests. A Conservative government will rebuild this country from the ground up. We will reclaim our borders, restore fiscal sanity, crack down on crime, and confront the drug networks poisoning our streets. We will lower taxes, get more homes built, and reward hard work.

Canada's promise was never about a government serving its own interests. It was about a place where anyone willing to work hard could build a life of opportunity. It was about safety, stability, and strength. The Liberals have betrayed that promise. Now it's time for us to take it back.

This is our moment. It's time to put Canada first. Our country, our families, our future must come first. A Conservative government will restore what's been lost. We will rebuild Canada, stronger and more united than ever before.

The time for waiting is over. The time for an election is now.

Your Path Forward: Sharing the dementia journey through art

By Lori Penner

This January, during National Alzheimer's Awareness Month, the Alzheimer Society of Manitoba aims to help Manitobans better understand dementia and the resources available through their campaign, "Your Path Forward."

Hearing the words "You have dementia" can be overwhelming, but you don't have to navigate your next steps alone.

"We want people to know that we're here to help you take those next steps and help you make informed decisions. We provide education, direct one-on-one support, and group support to give you the resources you need to feel hopeful that you can live a quality life even with a diagnosis of dementia," says South Central regional coordinator Rebecca Atkinson.

More than 20,300 Manitobans live with dementia today, a number expected to reach 39,100 by 2050. The Alzheimer Society wants you to know that no matter where you are on your dementia journey, they are there to offer guidance and connect you with the right resources.

"We want people with dementia to be involved in their journey," stresses Atkinson. "Awareness needs to increase. We need to talk about it, find others who are also going through it, and plan your next step. What will give you joy, meaning, and quality in your life?"

Minds in Motion programs are also starting up again, along with ongoing support groups for care partners in Carman, Altona, and Morden. A listing of all available support groups, both online and in-person for people living with dementia and care partners can be found online at alzheimer.mb.ca.

"The whole point is to help people make informed decisions. So here is the education and the knowledge, now put that in the context of your life: your values and your resources, and make the best life that you can," Atkinson says.

'I LOVE MY BRAIN' EXHIBITION

In honour of Alzheimer's Awareness Month, the Golden Prairie Arts Council in Carman is hosting a special exhibit called I Love My Brain.

"For the last few months, we've been striving to get people living with dementia, as well as other brain health categories such as schizophrenia, depression, anxiety, autism, and brain injury, to contribute art," Atkinson explains. "The intention is to open the door for people to share their journey."

"Art has been known to help people move forward through challenging times. I see this as an opportunity to learn and to grow from others' experiences. It will spark conversation, enhance cognition, and encourage people to see a broader horizon."

A call for local artists was made months ago, and a number of fascinating exhibits from people of all walks of life and experiences came forward.

Submissions from a variety of area artists, including Rebecca Atkinson (left) and Nigel Bart (right) are on display at the Carman gallery in an exhibition dubbed I Love My Brain, honouring Alzheimer's Awareness Month.

Golden Prairie Arts Council executive director Nigel Bart says they have received submissions from about 15 artists.

"Much of the artwork is from people who have lived experience with brain injury or Alzheimer's," he says. "The whole idea is to bring awareness, and it's exciting being a part of it."

Each of the pieces is creative and insightful, Bart adds.

"They are incredibly thought-provoking and heart-wrenching at the same time, reflecting a diversity of issues. We have one artist with autism, one with schizophrenia, and some with Alzheimer's. It's an interesting mixture of people who are speaking out through their art."

The exhibition runs from until Jan. 31 at the Carman gallery, located at 38 Centre Ave. West. For more details, call 204-745-6568.

"Now is the time for conversation. Throughout the month, take in the exhibits, go outside of your comfort zone. Keep growing. Keep learning. It will enhance your cognition and broaden your horizon," Atkinson encourages.

thon. She was also the first Canadian woman to complete the 4 Deserts, a series of 250 km self-supported races across some of the harshest terrain in the world.

Huynh's journey began in Vietnam as the seventh of eight children. When she was four, her family escaped the war-torn country in a mass exodus known as the Boat People, making their way first to a refugee camp and finally to rural Canada to start a new life.

"I felt she was a great fit for our community," says Burton Saindon. "Her personal story is common in our area ... there's a relatability to her message that aligns perfectly with what PVLIP is all about."

Linh's presentation centres around living a life of intention and fearlessness, and she's eager to share it with PVLIP supporters.

"We settled in a small Canadian town ... and I really feel my years there and my family background shaped who I grew to become as an adult and the challenges that I've decided to take on," she says, noting a gathering of people passionate about the work of an organization like PVLIP "is my ultimate audience, because there's stories of growing up as a refugee, the classic immigration story, that I don't normally get to share.

"It's the core of who I am," Huynh says, adding it's exciting to be "sharing these stories that I know will be really touching, will be really inspiring and will really drive the message home that I know exactly what you're going through, because we went through it too."

Huynh's driving philosophy has been to explore everything that life has to offer, and she hopes to inspire others to do the same.

"I live and breathe this message so deeply: to 'wonder' off the beaten path," she says. "It just truly encapsulates everything that I feel—where is that sense of wonder and curiosity that will help extract you from a really hard place and just move you and your dreams forward?"

basement starting in the early 1970s, relying totally on volunteers to ensure the community had access to them.

The new SCRL branch started out in the Altona Mall before moving to other spaces in the community through the years. In 2022, they moved back into a much larger area of the mall with their collection of over 30,000 items.

The Miami and Manitou branches are the latest additions to the SCRL network, Miami joining in 2009 and Manitou in 2018, though both had been serving their communities for some time before that.

The Manitou Library first opened in 1990 and has in the years since significantly expanded its collection, hours of operation, and programming.

So too has the Miami Library, which started as a volunteer-run operation in 2001 loaning out books leftover from the former school library it sourced its collection from. Today it shares space with the RM of Thompson civic offices.

These five branches represent seven municipalities across southern Manitoba and together create a stronger library network than any one could on their own.

"Everybody has a different collection, different strengths," Ching says, noting in example that, "the Manitou branch administrator loves classics and literature, so they have some very obscure stuff in their collection there."

But wherever a given library material might call home, every patron across the region has access to it. SCRL's courier is kept busy bringing items from branch to branch for the thousands of inter-library loans requested by patrons annually.

The majority of people living in communities in the SCRL's service area are library patrons, Ching shares.

"We serve 44,000 people, and 68 per cent of those people have library cards," she says, pointing out larger library networks in Brandon or the Parkland region have uptake of closer to 20 per cent.

SCRL ARCHIVAL PHOTOS

A CHANGING LIBRARY

Ching has been with SCRL since 2004, serving as the Morden branch librarian for a decade before moving into the administrative side of things.

Over the past 20 years, the library has not only grown and changed, but the culture of its various branches very much has as well.

"What I've noticed is it was really going towards technology a lot," she says of the rise of e-readers, "but then that kind of plateaued."

The digital revolution didn't kill the demand for the library's in-house collection at all—2024 saw over 295,000 items borrowed by SCRL patrons, with over 118,000 people walking through the doors of the five branches—and the library has in fact embraced technology, using it to find new ways to engage patrons and get them the materials they want in the mediums they prefer.

In addition to the books and magazines that have long been on offer at local branches, they've also added materials such as board games and puzzles, grown existing collections of DVDs and audiobooks, and provided access to digital streaming services for not just books but also newspapers, magazines, comic books, and even movies.

Programming has also exploded in recent years, and it goes well beyond book clubs (though they have those as well). Long gone are the day where libraries are meant to be simply quiet places for reading or studying—now they aim to be true community hubs, Ching says, welcoming everyone for a myriad of clubs, workshops, and other gatherings.

"It's not just about passive programming and storytime anymore. It's about bringing people in," she says. "We have Nerf battles, cookbook clubs, crochet-a-thons ..."

The various branches host crafting nights, Lego clubs, workshops on a litany of skills, and community celebrations such as the upcoming Family Literary parties that will close out this month.

SCRL's staff have been leading the charge on all this varied programming, trying new things to see what works best in each community, Ching says.

"They're doing what they love ... it's exciting to watch."

Looking to the future, Ching expects they'll continue to grow both their materials collection and programming to meet the ever-changing needs of area residents. Increased partnerships with other groups are also very much on the library's radar.

"We're finding the more we partner with others in the community, some of our newcomer groups, for example ..." the more new ideas are generated, Ching says, pointing out the discussion at a recent cookbook club session turned to the international traditions newcomers enjoyed over the holidays. "It made me think we need to have a 'flavours of our community'—how do you celebrate Easter or Chanukah or whatever. Stuff we know of but we're not familiar with."

They're also looking at things like a tool-lending library and related how-to workshops, and creating a dedicated youth room at the Winkler branch.

"IT FEELS JOYFUL"

Recent years have come with more than their fair share of challenges—pandemic closures, calls for certain books to be restricted or taken off the shelves—but the SCRL has weathered those storms and come out the stronger for them.

"It feels joyful, is what I've found," Ching says. "We've come through that bit of a rough patch, but it really showed us where we belonged in the community, and the community understands that we are here for them."

The Morden Library quickly outgrew its first location (left) and has called several buildings downtown home in the years since. Right: The Altona Library joined the SCRL network in 1988 and had space in the Altona Mall. After a few other moves, it is now back in the mall, in a much larger space.

Bangladeshi community celebrates

SUBMITTED PHOTOS

The local Bangladeshi community had a special celebration in Morden Saturday. Pitha Utshob is a deeply rooted tradition in Bangladeshi culture, especially during the winter season, and it's a time when families come together to enjoy traditional rice cakes and desserts made with love. "By hosting this event here, we not only preserve our heritage but also introduce it to our friends and neighbors in Morden," said organizer Jahangir Talukdar. "It's about sharing our culture and building connections within this amazing community." Plans are in the works to create a Bangladeshi community association to organize events, promote the culture and provide support to new families arriving in the area.

Global shipping co. cuts the ribbon on Morden HQ

By Lorne Stelmach

Morden might seem like an odd location for the headquarters of an international shipping and trade company, but it makes perfect sense to the owners of Blue Sea Star Logistics.

For Shokoufeh Hamidi, who is the co-founder along with husband Meysam Tavana, Morden offers many advantages not only business-wise but personally as well.

"In terms of logistics, it's a great location because it's near the border with the United States," Hamidi noted shortly before their official opening and ribbon cutting Saturday.

"We saw Morden and all of the opportunities that we could have here and also the connection in Canada and the United States ... I think we have a good chance of having a good business over here."

Blue Sea Star Logistics started in Iran and is a holding company with about two decades of experience in international trading and shipping. With a global team of shipping and logistic professionals, they offer services in every step of the supply chain process to its customers.

Blue Sea Star Logistics might have the highest asset holdings of any company in town, but it's just that most of those assets are overseas or on the high seas, and it would be the city's largest employer when it is considered it globally has perhaps 800 to 900 employees counting staff on board their ships and in ports.

"We started with two staff in the beginning and then little by little we made it bigger and grew the company," said Hamidi.

Given Tavana lived in China for about 15 years and was fluent in the Chinese language and had connections there, it helped them expand their business in Asia.

"We founded an office in China and then in Dubai and after that in Turkey," said Hamidi. "And for some time, we were thinking about expanding the business to North America."

Morden then became their choice of location.

"It's not that difficult for us to sit here in Morden and to control everything. And Morden is a good place to live, first of all," she said. "We have a good friend over here who introduced us to this place first of all."

"Then we figured we can operate everything virtually and we do have our team over there who do the operations," she continued. "We were looking for some place where we could raise our kids in a good community ... we were tired of the big city and the crowds and every thing going on ... here feels more like a home.

"There are huge opportunities here, and it doesn't need to be in a place like Toronto or Montreal or Vancouver," said Hamidi, adding they would probably need to bring in some more experienced staff. "Little by little, we are going to need some more staff."

Morden economic development officer Jason Dyck said it is always rewarding to see new businesses get established in Morden, but he acknowledged this one is a little different.

"This is a particularly unique business too and shows that Morden and the quality of life Morden offers can attract entrepreneurial talent from anywhere in the world," he said.

"In this case, Meysam was an applicant of our business stream, where a work permit is granted to overseas applicants to come to Morden and invest in establishing a new local business," Dyck explained. "The City of

Calling all crocheters

Winkler Library hosting come-and-go blanket-making marathon next week

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler branch of the South Central Regional Library hosts its second annual Crochet Marathon next week.

To take part, simply stop by anytime on Tuesday, Jan. 21 from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. to help crochet afghan squares or assemble finished squares into blankets that will be donated to the patients receiving care at Eden Health Care Services' psychiatric hospital.

"I've had my mental health struggles, and I'm very grateful that Eden is there if I need them," shares organizer and library clerk Linda Funk. "And I know that when you're going through that, your sense of self-worth takes a real hit. So to be given, in that situation, a gift like this of something that's handmade and from someone in the community whom you probably never met, to know that someone cares enough to give something like that is a real encouragement."

Next week's crochet-a-thon is very much a come-and-go event.

"Just drop in and do a little crocheting," Funk says. "We are hoping that we'll get some people out who will be willing to start assembling blankets out of the squares we already have, because we've been getting a lot of donations of squares. It's been glorious, but we are behind in getting them put together."

Hence the sewing bee, which last year resulted in nine finished blankets and hundreds of squares being completed or donated that day. Several more blankets have been assembled and donated to Eden in the months since.

The Winkler library has had a basket of yarn and needles out in one of its reading nooks for patrons to use since 2017, and also accepts donations of yarn and 4x4 granny squares for this project year-round.

A few of the blankets last year's Crochet Marathon generated for the patients of Eden Health Care Services. The Winkler Library hosts this year's event on Tuesday, Jan. 21.

"Just the other day I had someone come in asking, 'Are you still taking squares?' and she handed me a grocery bag of 81 colour-coordinated granny squares," Funk says.

Supplies next week will be provided, but participants are welcome to bring their own yarn and needles if they prefer.

Annual ag show draws hundreds to St. Jean

By Lori Penner

For nearly four decades, the community of St. Jean Baptiste has been the place for "Canada's Biggest Little Farm Show." Now in its 38th year, St. Jean Farm Days is still going strong.

The annual event drew hundreds of local producers and exhibitors to the Centennial Hall on Jan. 8-9, to connect with other farmers, ag specialists, and dealers from across the region.

Once again, visitors enjoyed the same great food that Farm Days is known for, including a continental breakfast and homemade cuisine featuring the region's signature pea soup and open-faced sandwiches.

This year, however, marked a significant change as the Knights of Columbus, who have prepared and served the food at Farm Days for 37 years, stepped down.

Gilbert Sabourin, who heads up the organizing committee along with Brunel Sabourin, Jennifer Sabourin, and Wayne Klassen, explained the transition.

"Our parents were a part of the original Farm Days, and we've stepped up over the last few years. The average age of the Knights was getting up there. A lot of them moved away from town, so they disbanded the group last summer. This was their main fundraiser all those years. Anything they made went right back into the community, so it's kind of the end of an era."

St. Jean-Baptiste has proudly held the title of "Soup Pea Capital of Canada" for decades. Although that market has since shifted to Saskatchewan, the region is still famous for its traditional soup.

"Morris Bigway had a meeting with my dad, recipes for the traditional pea soup and the ham sandwiches were shared, and they did a fabulous job. They duplicated everything. Why fix something if it's not broken?" Sabourin noted.

He says the frosty weather on both days of the event played a role in boosting attendance.

"Most of the time, it's correlated to the temperature. The colder it is, the more people attend. If it's minus 35, not too many people want to start their grain augers and their grain trucks, so they come here," Sabourin said. However, he also acknowledged that the demand for grain was high. "But now the elevators want grain.

They have train cars they want to send down to the States in case there are tariffs coming. Lots of people are hauling grain right now."

Visitors at Farm Days also had the opportunity to network with other producers and 51 exhibitors about what's going to be important to their farm operations this upcoming season. One of the big sellers of the show, Sabourin added, is that attendees know they'll get to talk to familiar faces.

"We work hard to get experts who can present on current topics that are relevant to local producers. The people who can help them are all right here. With some of the larger shows, such as the three-day event in Brandon, it might be harder to connect with your person on the day you're there. Here, they'll be there."

The event also featured a full speaker program with topics relevant to the agricultural business.

"You always want to hear about things that are current to the day. Something that's

Royals, Wild post losses, Bombers victorious

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Royals found themselves on the losing end of an 8-4 rout over the weekend.

The SEMHL team welcomed the Notre Dame Hawks to town Sunday night.

Despite Colton Harder opening scoring midway through the first period, the Royals quickly found themselves down 3-1 before the buzzer and then 5-1 in the middle frame before Aaron Lewadniuk and Braden Hildebrand added Winkler's second and third goals. Notre Dame then managed a sixth one with a little over a minute to go on the clock.

The third period saw the home team's Adam Henry score shorthanded 10 minutes in, but two more goals from the Hawks—including an empty-netter—bookended the period to give them the win 8-4.

Matthew Thiessen made 36 saves in net for Winkler. The Royals won the shots-on-net battle 48-43.

The Red River Wild suffered a similar fate at the hands of the Warren Mercs the night before.

Red River lit up the board in each period thanks to goals from Jonah Wasylak, Geordie Keane, and Tj Matuszewski, but Warren's six in response gave them the win.

The Wild's Jayden Catellier made 41 saves off 47 shots. His teammates sent 36 the other way.

The Morden Bombers, meanwhile, had a much better weekend, defeating Portage 7-4 Saturday and then Warren 6-2 on Sunday.

Mike Rey and Collin Shirley led the night in scoring against the Islanders with a hat trick and a double, respectively, while additional goals from Michael Hlady and Derek Wiebe and a 35-save performance from netminder Reed Peters rounded out the win.

The next night, the Bombers were up 4-0 before the Mercs managed even one goal. Tyler Peers and Hlady scored in the first and Shirley and Keane Boucher scored within seconds of each other early in the second. Shirley then got his second of the night at 19:52 to send Morden into the final period up 5-1.

There, Derek Wiebe made it 6-1. Warren managed just one more goal, giving Morden the win 6-2.

Peters made 44 saves in net as the Mercs outshot the Bombers 46-31.

Ste. Anne (20 points), Springfield (17 points), and Notre Dame (16 points) are currently at the top of the SEMHL standings followed by Red River in fourth place (7-4-1, 15 points), Winkler in fifth (7-4-0-1, 15 points), and Morden in sixth (7-4, 14 points).

Coming up, Morden hosts Ste. Anne Thursday and then plays in Portage Saturday, Red River is in Carman Friday and then hosts Ile des Chenes Sunday, Winkler hosts Springfield Sunday

Pembina Valley's Gavin Rondeau lifts the stick of Eastman's Lucas Laramée to keep him from making a pass in Sunday's 5-2 Hawks win.

Hawks earn five points

By Lorne Stelmach

Picking up five of a possible six points made it a successful week for the male U18 Pembina Valley Hawks.

The Hawks earned a 3-1 win over Central Plains last Tuesday that snapped a seven-game winless streak. It was followed by a 2-1 shootout loss to the Winnipeg Wild Saturday and then a 5-2 win Sunday over Eastman.

The Hawks got on the board with two goals in the second period against Central Plains and added one more in the third before giving up a late goal to the Capitals.

Paxton White, Carson Hiebert, and Tegan Fehr scored for the Hawks, and goalie Ryler Gates got the win with 34 saves as Pembina Valley had a 38-35 edge in shots on goal.

Karsen Dyck kept the Hawks in the game against the second-place Wild with 42 saves before Winnipeg prevailed in a shootout.

The Wild opened scoring in the first period, but then Carson Unger's fifth of the season tied it up for Pembina Valley in the second period.

Shots on goal were 44-28 in favour of Winnipeg, who connected for the lone shootout goal on their second of three shots.

After a scoreless first period, the Hawks took a 2-1 lead on Eastman in the second frame and then put it away with three more goals in the third.

Cole Secord had a pair for Pembina Valley, with the other goals coming from Ragnar Gillis, Haiden Friesen, and Gavin Rondeau. Gates made 45 saves as Eastman held a 47-32 edge in shots on goal.

Pembina Valley improved to just a game below .500 at 13-14-3-2 for 31 points, which is good for ninth place—five points ahead of Kenora and four behind Interlake.

This week the Hawks visit Southwest Wednesday before hosting the Winnipeg Thrashers Friday and the Norman Northstars Sunday.

Winkler Flyers beat Steelers, Terriers in OT, SO

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Flyers added two more to the win column last weekend.

Friday night saw them down the Steelers in Selkirk 4-3 in overtime.

The home team was up 2-0 when Niklas Gudmundson finally got Winkler on the board midway through the second period.

Jacob Michelson tied it up 2-2 in the final frame's second minute, only to have Selkirk pull ahead with their third of the night 57 seconds later.

Kam Thomas got the tying goal at 10:24, ultimately forcing overtime. There, Nicholas Mckee scored the game-winner nearly three minutes in.

Winkler outshot Selkirk 58-42. Leif Ekblad made 39 saves in net for the Flyers.

A shootout was needed for a decision two nights later in Portage.

Winkler was up 2-1 thanks to goals from Thomas and Jared Grenier, but a late goal from the home team sent things into overtime.

When that failed to solve anything, the resulting shootout saw McKee and the Terriers' Dawson Madden both score in the first round, Gudmundson and Portage's Koy Funk miss in the second, and then Thomas get the game-winner when Tristan Gravenor missed for Portage in the third round. Ernst was between the posts for Winkler in the 3-2 win, making 32 saves off 34 shots.

The Flyers are currently in second place in the MGEU East Division standings with a record of 26-6-2.

They're just two points behind the first-place Steinbach Pistons and one ahead of the third-place Terriers, but have two and three games in hand over those teams, respectively.

Female Hawks move into fifth place

By Lorne Stelmach

The female U18 Pembina Valley Hawks moved into fifth place with a pair of victories this past weekend.

Pembina Valley earned a key 5-0 shutout win Friday over the Westman Wildcats, who are now three points behind the Hawks in the standings. Pembina Valley followed the win up with a 3-2 overtime win Sunday afternoon over the Central Plains Capitals.

Kasia Rakowski got the 37-save shutout to lead Pembina Valley to the victory over Westman.

Winkler headed north to play Waywayseecappo Tuesday night (results were not available at press time) and then returns home to host the Dauphin Kings and the Virden Oil Capitals this Friday and Saturday.

In other Flyers news, the team announced a couple of trades last week ahead of the CJHL trade deadline.

They acquired 20-year-old forward

Andrew Morton from the CCHL's Rockland Nationals, traded defenseman Sully Ross to the Portage Terriers in exchange for defenseman Jacob Michelson, and traded forward Ethan MacTavish to the Swan Valley Stampeders in exchange for a player development fee.

The Hawks led 2-0 and 4-0 at the intermissions, and they were paced by Jessica Anderson, who picked up a hat trick to put her to 17 goals on the season.

Casey O'Brien and Piper Sawatzky also scored for Pembina Valley, which was outshot 37-30 by Westman.

The Hawks then bombarded Central Plains with 57 shots on goal, but they still needed O'Brien's winner with 3:37 to go in overtime after Central Plains managed to even the game with just 22 seconds remaining in regulation.

Emma Durand and Abigail Brigg also scored for the Hawks, while Madison Froese stopped 20 of 22 shots for the win.

The victories improved the Hawks to 11-14-1 for 23 points, but they remain six points behind fourth-place Yellowhead and just three and four points up on Westman and Brandon.

Pembina Valley has a break from league play this week but then has a busy three-game weekend Jan. 24-26 against Interlake, Yellowhead, and the Winnipeg Ice.

Pembina Valley Royals enjoying new jerseys

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Pembina Valley Royals U18 team are looking pretty spiffy in their new uniforms this season, thanks to the work of team management and the support of local sponsors.

Head coach Mark Bergstresser shares that the new mixed team—made up of Gr. 10-12 players from Morden, Winkler, Altona, Morris, and St. Jean—started the season without Royals branded jerseys, but manager Crystal Hildebrand’s work drumming up sponsors has allowed them to swap the old ones out for new, unified home and away jerseys bearing the team name and logo.

“She did a great job of getting the sponsorship money and ordering the jerseys and getting the tournament going,” Bergstresser says. The Royals went 3-1 to clinch the third place medal at their home tournament in

Morden Jan. 3-4. “It was her idea to get [the push for new jerseys] going, and we’re so happy to have her on our team.”

The Royals have been playing in the Eastman Minor Hockey league, where they’ve posted six wins and a tie.

“We’ve been doing pretty good,” Bergstresser said of the 12 games they’ve played so far this year. The season runs until the end of February, followed by provincials in Niverville in March.

With players coming from all over the region, it takes a lot of commitment to get everyone together for practices—once a week in Plum Coulee—and weekend games, but Bergstresser says the kids have stepped up. And the new jerseys were met with a great deal of enthusiasm from everyone.

“They’re used to wearing a jersey from Altona or Morris or whatever, the same old thing, and here they got to actually pick their own numbers, they really like the colours. So, yeah, they were very excited.”

> ST. JEAN FARM DAYS, FROM PG. 12

been consistent for 38 years is that we always have a grain marketing speaker each day. We always have a weather-related speaker, and the rest is whatever is relevant to the times,” Sabourin said.

“It’s been the same format since we began. People want to know about the forecast in terms of market, weather, and insects, along with other things like the resistant weeds that we have coming up from the States. We bring all these experts here where people can get all the information they need and talk to local people about local issues. They get answers, right down to how to survive the current market.”

Reflecting on the event’s longevity, Sabourin said, “I never thought it would go on this long. If you looked within a 15-mile radius in 1986, how many farmers were there? And you look at 2025, and there are a lot fewer farmers. It’s a whole new generation of producers. Back then, I could have named every farmer in the room, and now I know maybe 10 per cent of them.”

Despite the changes over the years, the essence of St. Jean Farm Days remains the same.

“We’ve had some of the same guys coming year after year, traveling from Portage la Prairie and Miami. They come for the speakers and the meals. And the timing is perfect. It’s the first show of the year; by the end of February, people are ‘meetinged’ out. It’s a familiar, low-key event. Pretty much business as usual,” Sabourin said.

Over the years, new features have been added to keep Farm Days fresh and engaging. For instance, the farmers’ bar was introduced a few years ago.

“We have the beer, and one year the cooler stopped working. I got a big round grain tub, filled it with snow, and people loved it. Now we do it every year,” Sabourin shared. Despite the additions, the cost remains affordable. “It’s still just $10 for breakfast, lunch, and all this learning. We kept it low-cost for all our exhibitors and guests.”

The purpose of the event has always been to connect local producers with each other and experts in the industry.

“We wanted to provide a place where they didn’t have to travel very far to get the advice and the products they needed. It’s really a great event,” Sabourin concluded.

PUBLIC NOTICE

CITY OF MORDEN PUBLIC NOTICE REGARDING LOCAL IMPROVEMENT PLAN NO. 01-25 – BY-LAW NO. 02-2025 STANDPIPE PROJECT

The Council of the City of Morden has scheduled a public hearing at the Morden Civic Center at 100-195 Stephen Street in Morden, Manitoba on the 27th of January 2025 at 7:30 P.M. to present the following local improvement plan.

The purpose of this local improvement levy is to fund the replacement of old worn-out standpipe with new standpipe and THM removal system at the Morden Water treatment Plant.

The local improvement tax to be levied under this proposal is to be based on the portioned value of all assessable property in the City, which includes taxable, grant-in-lieu and otherwise exempt properties in the City of Morden, and the tax is to be based on the portioned value of all these properties. The potential taxpayers under this plan are the owners of said properties.

The total estimated cost of this local improvement is $2,450,000.00, and it is to be funded by City of Morden borrowing at a maximum rate of 5.9 % over 15 years.

The rate will be calculated as follows: Based on the calculated annual repayment amount of $250,613.12 and the City of Morden's 2025 local improvement district preliminary assessment value of $721,350,360.00 an estimated 0.347 mill rate will be required. Calculated on a residential property valued at $300,000.00 (portioned value of $135,000.00), an estimated $46.85 local improvement tax will be levied annually for 15 years.

The annual operating and maintenance costs associated with the proposed local improvement will be covered under the City of Morden's annual operating budget.

A written objection may be filed with the City Manager at the Civic Office located at 100-195 Stephen Street in Morden, Manitoba prior to the commencement of the hearing. At the hearing, Council will hear any potential taxpayer who wishes to make a presentation, ask questions, or register an objection to the local improvement plan.

All objections, written or verbal, must be filed prior to the adjournment of the hearing and must include the name, address and property description of the person filing the objection and the grounds of their objection.

Copies of the local improvement plan are available at the municipal office at 100-195 Stephen Street in Morden, Manitoba, R6M 1V3 and on the municipal website at: <https://www.mymorden.ca/>

Dated at the City of Morden, this 16th day of December 2024 and issued pursuant to Section 318 of The Municipal Act.

OBITUARY

Tina Thiessen

Tina Thiessen, age 78 of Miami, MB passed away at her residence on Saturday, December 28, 2024.

She is survived by two sons and two daughters: Henry Thiessen, Agatha (Randy) Krahn, Katharina (Corny) Wiebe, Abram (Esther) Thiessen, and four grandchildren: Rochelle, Arlen and Adrian Thiessen, and Allison Wiebe.

She was predeceased by her husband Jacob in 2021.

Mom was born in Altona on October 11, 1946 to her parents, Abram F. and Mary (Sawatzky)

Unger and spent the first months of her life near St. Joseph. In 1947 they moved to a farm in the Haywood area where she grew up in a small log house, learning the skills to be a homemaker. She also milked up to 12 cows when the need arose. She loved baking from a young age. She also had a love for music and played the organ.

Mom was baptized upon the confession of her faith in Jesus Christ as her Lord and Saviour by Bishop John A. Friesen and accepted as a member of the Sommerfeld Mennonite church at Stephenfield on May 19, 1964. On October 10, 1965 she entered into holy matrimony with Jacob Thiessen with whom she shared the joys and sorrows of marriage for 56 years and 18 days. They were blessed with two sons and two daughters. In 1972 they moved to their present location.

Mom was a homemaker and helped with milking cows and other farm work. She kept a large garden and cooked many meals for the family farm that included Dad's parents and siblings and sometimes hired help. She operated farm equipment, from tractors and trucks to combines. Now, in her later years, she still made meals for us when we were busy with the farm work. Mom enjoyed entertaining guests in her home, serving fasha or a full meal. She still did all the canning and still loved baking. Very often when we'd come in from working outside, if she wasn't in the kitchen, she'd be sitting in her chair, reading her Bible. She had a deep concern for the souls of her children and grandchildren. Part of Mom's regular routine the last few years was riding her exercise bike in what Adrian called "Her Exercise Room", while listening to Back to the Bible every weekday morning when possible. She kept a record of distance and calories, with the last entry being December 23, 2024.

The family would like to express their thanks and appreciation for all the prayers, cards, flowers, phone calls, messages, visits and meals. We wish to thank the ambulance attendants, RCMP, and medical examiner for their services. Thank you to Dr. Berard, who has been Mom's family doctor for many years. Thank you also to Wiebe's Funeral Home. Thank you to the ministerial of the Old Colony Mennonite Church, song leaders, ushers, sound man, serving group and caretakers.

Donations may be made to the St. Boniface Hospital Foundation or a charity of one's choice. Funeral Service was held on Saturday, January 4th, 2025 at 2 p.m. at the Chortitz Old Colony Church with Burial at Chortitz Community Cemetery after the Service.
