Local Catan player makes it to national semi-finals

By Ashleigh Viveiros

Morden's Nastasha Kroeker-Ortiz made it all the way to the semi-finals at the Catan National Championships earlier this month.

Kroeker-Ortiz earned her spot at the event, held at the Snakes & Lattes College in Toronto May 4-5, by winning Sixteen13 Ministry's inaugural Manitoba Catan Tournament in Winkler back in February. Her prize was having her airfare and accommodations in Toronto covered by event sponsors.

Portage-Lisgar

The national competition pitted her against 28 other Catan players from across Canada.

"It was the same setup [as the local tournament]," Kroeker-Ortiz explained. "It was three games on the qualifier day and then semi-finals and finals on the second day."

She came through her first day undefeated.

"Catan is always a game of calculated risks and a lot of luck of the die," Kroeker-Ortiz reflected. "There's a

In the Settlers of Catan board game, players acquire and trade for the resources they need to build and develop their settlements. Players earn victory points for doing so—the first to reach 10 points wins the game.

While the deals in her semi-final game didn't go her way and knocked her out of the running for the championship title, it was still a fun experience overall, Kroeker-Ortiz said.

"The people there were pretty great. There's a few friends that I made that invited me to play online with them,"

At the event, Kroeker-Ortiz got to meet with Guido Teuber, the son of Settlers of Catan creator Klaus Teuber. she shared.

The trip also gave her the chance to take in some of the sights of Toronto and visit family nearby.

Kroeker-Ortiz intends to defend her title at the local Catan qualifier next year.

"The thing is, I'll probably get blocked hard [on the deals]," she said with a laugh.

Massage-a-thon raises $700 for SCCR

By Lorne Stelmach

A day of massages in Morden Saturday had students working on patients for a good cause.

The massage-a-thon at Morden Massage Therapy Centre saw the proceeds of $700 donated to South Central Cancer Resource.

Owner and therapist Linda Menzies said the event fit well with her belief that part of being a good health care professional is supporting the com-

"As a mentor for the college students, I always strive to build community with these students ... teaching them so much more than just seeing patients and treating them ... it's actually building community and a good way to do that is to give back." The massage-a-thon tied in with an ongoing program of the centre.

"It's part of our 360 program where students come to Morden Massage Therapy Centre to do their clinical as part of their college program," said Menzies. "As a business we take that money and then we always put the proceeds into different community organizations."

The students themselves choose who they want as the recipient.

"And to just up it one, they wanted to take a day and actually volunteer their services and kind of work together," Menzies said.

New acupuncturist Dr. Yali Bai also donated her services for the day, and it was a good opportunity for her to be introduced to patients.

"She has had really good feedback already. Most of them that have seen her have already booked back in," said Menzies, noting Bai is currently taking patients on Fridays.

Winkler MCC thrift shop anniversary raffle tickets on sale now

By Lorne Stelmach

A quilt raffle will both raise funds and honour the heritage of the MCC Thrift Store in Winkler.

As part of its 50th anniversary celebrations this year, a quilt was specially made for the raffle, and organizers suggested it was a fitting way to pay tribute for the occasion.

"Quilting has always been a big part of the history of the MCC thrift stores and MCC, and quilt auctions have taken place for many years," noted Doreen Warms, chairperson of the 50th anniversary festivities. "Our celebration committee thought it would be a great idea if we could have a quilt to raffle off to get some funds towards our MCC missions.

"We're hoping to raise some good funds and to honour the quilting heritage part of the MCC. Of course, there are many other things that go on in the MCC organization, but quilting certainly has been a huge part of it," she added. "We still have ladies coming in to do quilts that get sent to the needy and overseas."

Working on the quilt became a labour of love for Lydia Zacharias and Katie Friesen. The former cut and pieced together the quilt front, while the latter did the machine work.

"They both donated their time and efforts," said Warms. "So we're really excited about this quilt and hope that we have lots of people who are interested in winning the quilt. I know from people who have seen peeks of the quilt they have certainly shown some excitement."

"A lot of work went into it by Margaret Reimer, who shopped for the fabric," Zacharias noted. "She went to the U.S. and to Brandon and to Carman and all over."

She called it a privilege to be involved in this project.

"I found it a real honour to be asked to work on this quilt. I have sewn many quilts for MCC but never one where the pattern of the fabric was chosen specifically. It is a simple design, and the colour choices are pleasing to the eye."

Organizers are hoping to sell 2,000 tickets, and they see the potential to raise between $6,000 and $10,000, with individual tickets going for $5 each, five for $20, or a book of 15 for $50.

There is a second prize of a barbecue donated by Parkside Home Hard-three days of celebration planned for the store.

"We have all kinds of things planned for Sept. 25-27 because Sept. 25 in 1974 was the date that 15 ladies got together for a meeting ... that was the inception of this store as a result of that meeting," noted Reimer. "There will be special things happening throughout the store.

"We're going to have a sale, and people can pick their discount," added Warms. "They can pull a discount ticket, and it's going to be anywhere between 10 and 50 per cent ... on items under $100."

"There will be people selling raffle tickets, including board members, but there will tickets sold here at MCC in the furniture area. The main sales will probably happen here," noted Reimer. "We've set a fairly ambitious goal for this year ... we want to send half a million [dollars] to MCC ... this is going to help to meet that goal."

Also connected to 2024 being the anniversary year was a recent volunteer appreciation event where a free lunch was provided for the the store's hundreds of volunteers over three days, and there was also a dinner at Central Station Community Centre.

"There is a special volunteer appreciation week that is done nationally," noted board member Don Klassen. "It was great. I think it was very well received by everyone."

Menzies sees the involvement of students at the centre as very much being a win-win scenario for everyone.

"The patients are so good with their understanding, knowing that these students are going to be doing their training," she said. "They get to learn so much more than just working on each other at the college ... you don't see the dysfunctions that they would maybe have in a clinic setting."

"It keeps me on the ball too," Menzies added. "They've got some pretty good questions ... it keeps me on top of my knowledge."

"It was such a humbling experience to be able to participate in this event," noted Jessica Kraemer, a massage therapy student from Wellington College. "It feels great to know we can make a positive difference in our own community. It is the least we could do to show our gratitude to the people who support us as massage students. There are so many patients out there with different conditions who suffer in pain every single day. Just being able to relieve some of that is so rewarding."

Representing South Central Cancer Resource, board member Jack Pethybridge said they were very appreciative of the support.

"Any money that we get, we have to fundraiser ourselves," he noted. "Every little bit we get really helps us because since COVID there's been more and more patients that we see every year or people that we can help."

PCAN hosts first community conversation

By Lorne Stelmach

An evening of dialogue around climate change brought an encouraging response for the organization behind

The Pembina Climate Action Network (PCAN) held its first community conversation last Tuesday in Morden. There were about 30 people on hand to hear about the organization and share their thoughts.

"It tells me that people are at least interested in talking about it, and I think that is really hopeful," said co-chairperson Sandy Plett. "Conversation is the gateway. We have to start talking before we can start doing anything."

PCAN grew from discussions last fall about what could be done here at the community level about climate change. The organization took shape early this year, modelled somewhat after the like-minded Altona Community Action Network.

PCAN's goal is to help advance the conversation around climate change and to build increased awareness at the local level, so having an evening for dialogue seemed to be a good starting point, Plett said.

"In my view, there can be a progression of becoming conversant and learning to talk about these things and these polarizing things and we can start to make plans together," she

"We called it Pembina because we didn't want it to just be Morden," she added. "Even to do a Google search maybe for this region and find something that has the word climate in it would be important for people who are looking for allies to talk about climate ... when I moved here, I looked for groups, and I couldn't find anything."

Plett sees it as a grassroots effort to take action in addressing something that can be very overwhelming.

"What we need in the world and in the community and in the region, at all levels, is people to stop thinking about just what can they do and think about what we can do," she said. "We have way more potential for change if we work together.

"This is about finding partners and finding the passions and the things that we care about ... and find people who want to work at that together," she continued. "Becoming more informed and more educated about it will help us to move this out of little niche conversations and into the workplaces and into our family circles, our friends."

The group discussions at the gathering last week offered a number of questions for people to consider:

- What about climate change keeps you up at night?
- What gives you hope?
- If you could do anything to adapt to or mitigate climate change, what would you do?
- What barriers and resistance do you see to addressing climate change?
- What alternatives and solutions would you like to see folks try in our

A few dozen people came out to learn more about the Pembina Climate Action Network (PCAN) at its first community conversation last week. Right: Co-president Sandy Plett.

In the end, Plett hoped the evening might get more people to join them for their monthly meetings or at least register for their newsletter to stay informed about what's happening in the area.

"It's a chance to connect people with actions," she said. "The other hope from an evening like this is just for people to see each other and to connect."

In the meantime, PCAN may have a few projects already in the works after having been contacted by the Discovery Nature Sanctuary about volunteers and helping with the development of pollinator gardens as well as perhaps an invasive species removal project at the lake. In the immediate future, they will also be at next month's Arbor Day event in

"There are people contacting us and saying, 'What about this?' So that is exciting to me," said Plett. "We are dreaming about what we will do then after summer and how the group can dig into different kinds of work."

Morris council presents $5.2M financial plan

By Siobhan Maas

Morris town council presented their 2024 financial plan to the public on May 9. The $5.2 million budget is 4.37 per cent higher than that of last year.

Mayor Scott Crick commented that "it ended up being a challenging year for budgeting" because several "time sensitive projects came together at the same time." These included replacement of the town's main water distribution plant, infrastructure for the new child care facility on the south end of Morris, and the addition of an accessibility ramp to the community pool.

"[The town] had limited control over the timelines once the commitments were made," the mayor noted. Crick assured that "as a council, we have done what we can to minimize the inflationary increases we've seen since 2021 to tax payers, [but] the cost of these major capital projects has given us less flexibility in 2024."

Mill rates, the amount of tax paid per dollar of property assessment value, increased 1.73 mills to 26.3. Residential and commercial properties will both see a seven per cent tax increase, along with a 1.3 per cent and 7.2 per cent school tax increase, respectively.

"For someone with a $200,000 home, this should impact them at $20/ month or less," Crick noted.

Proposed expenditures for Morris in 2024 include a four per cent increase to protective services, a 10 per cent increase for economic development, and an almost 200 per cent jump in fiscal service. Fiscal services cover all capital expenditures made annually by the town, plus all debt coverage. The flow-through of 100 per cent coverage of funds from the province for the new child care facility has artificially caused the jump in the fiscal services fund.

Transfers to reserves and capital purchases funded by reserves will fall by 27 per cent and 48 per cent, respectively.

In order to balance the proposed expenses, council will be withdrawing just over $860,000 from reserves. However, since 2019, the town has been able to add $1.1 million to the reserves fund, keeping in mind value-for-money for all activities in recent years. Several ambitious projects were unable to go ahead as planned, with monies remaining in reserve.

"Therefore, we are seeing the use of some reserves this year as we 'catch up' on a number of projects, including the zero entry of the pool (for which we had just under 40 per cent put aside in reserves), the new Town Community Plan, and a mandatory update to our zoning bylaw," explained Crick. "Unlike past reviews, we're ensuring that the work is being done fully, and that we leave a clear and inspirational plan for the community, and a development-friendly zoning by-law with provision to help with Main Street revitalization."

Crick added, "Where we do see a shift from 2023 is how funds are being spent. In 2023, we had major spends in deferred roadwork, which was ful-

Please show me the light if you can. Canada in the world accounts for 1.6 per cent of all greenhouse gases. Elimination of Canada would result in zero per cent in saving the world from total anarchy as the climate pundits claim we are heading

We are spending billions on trying, as Canadian politicians would have you think, from solely saving the planet from total annihilation. China on the other hand is plowing ahead with their plan. Their Paris Accord commitment is to stop their increase in greenhouse gas emissions by 2035! Noble of them to plan to stop 11 years from now.

Meanwhile, we're on the hook for carbon taxes that do nothing but add to our cost of living. And will do nothing to reduce emissions

More than one billion people on earth suffer from extreme poverty and look forward to a day when they aren't hungry. Do you think these people give a rat's butt about global warming? I agree, we should do everything we can to contribute, but do we throw the baby out with the bath water? Humans are much better at adaptation than mitigation. Let's put our emphasis on that and stop this crazy "only we can save the world" BS ... 'cause we can't even make a difference!

CFDC hosts museum reps from across North America

Morden played host last week to around 70 members of an international palaeontology organization.

The talking points at the annual meeting of the Association for Materials and Methods for Palaeontology would not have been of much interest to the general public, but it was important to the curators and lab technicians who came mostly from across the United States but also further afield.

"It's all very technical," agreed Adolfo Cuetara, executive director of the host Canadian Fossil Discovery Centre. "It's built around a high level of fossil preparation. There are people working in the main museums of North America.

"The members are technicians and curators from museums and universities internationally, not only in the United States and Canada but members from all over the world," he noted. "So we have here in Morden a selection of the best technicians and curators in palaeontology from around North America."

The week included a wide variety of presentations and workshops, and it started with a field trip to the escarpment north and west of Morden then concluded with a field trip to Winnipeg that included a visit to the Manitoba Museum.

"We stopped at the main sites that we know to show the geology of the Manitoba escarpment and where our fossils come from," said Cuetara.

He recognized that there were multiple benefits for the attendees.

"It's not only about teaching but more about brainstorming and collaboration between the members to discuss things like the best practices."

Fox echoed that sentiment.

"We're a small group of people from throughout the world," she said. "Mostly in our labs, there's maybe one or two people, so we tried to form this group to kind of share ideas and improve standards throughout the

"We like to go to smaller places. It's very welcoming, and it's kind of less pressure than a big city," said Fox, who also noted the importance of the CFDC. "We were very excited to come here ... I was really excited to see the collection.

"We're really interested in seeing how other museums do things, and how can we all work together to improve the standards for this kind of field," she said. "People have been telling me other researchers come here from all over the world ... if you have good fossils, people will travel from far and wide to do research on Cuetara was pleased to have the opportunity for the CFDC to play host.

ly funded from saved gas tax mon-

Completed 2023 projects included equipment renewal for both the public works and fire department, repaving of Charles Ave West, and a mower purchase for the recreation department.

"În 2024, we have more modest road plans, but are now spending $355K more on the pool, which is only partially funded from savings and grants," said Crick. "We are also seeing the borrowing cost for the industrial park going up, mainly as we cannot budget around property sales until they are contracted/assured. This amount will come down with any sales made during the year. And as mentioned, we now have additional borrowing for the water distribution plant."

Additional projects for 2024 include appliance upgrades and truck purchases for both public works and the fire department and asphalt overlay on the baseball diamond road, among others.

The town plans to contribute financially to the community by awarding monies and grants to the Valley Ag Society, Riverview Golf & Country Club, the community gardens, Red River Valley Food Bank, and Morris Area Senior Services, to name a few.

Crick is optimistic as council looks towards 2025's budget.

"The 2024 budget is somewhat atypical due to the timing and size of multiple projects occurring, [but] council believes [2025] will be much less challenging due to the completion of a number of projects, and that most 'catch up' will have happened in 2024. Although we cannot predict things fully at this time, council's goal will be to hold or reduce the amount of tax residents and businesses pay in

FIINN takes the stage at Manitou Opera House June 1

By Lorne Stelmach

There is a family dynamic in play when the Manitoba musical group FI-INN takes to the stage.

The band is built around three brothers —Daniel, John and Matt Baron—who have taken their unique friendship and musical talents to craft one of the best musical acts to come out of the prairies in recent years.

As they prepared for a Saturday, June 1 gig at the Manitou Opera House with local opening act Lakes and Pines, they reflected on how they navigate their relationship while collaborating on music.

"As brothers do, we weren't always really the best of friends, but eventually, through music, we developed an amazing rapport of writing and working together," said John. "That's probably my favourite thing to do: write music with Dan and Matt."

"I don't think we have a rivalry because that would make three different bands then," said Matt "We're able to be honest with each other in the creative process and we're on the same page enough that we understand each other's ideas."

"We take our sibling rivalries out on the soccer field," he added.

The double bill featuring Lakes and Pines and FIINN will be an opportunity to take in two up-and-coming bands in the alt-rock/indie-rock scene in Manitoba.

Lakes and Pines released their first full-length album Peace Comes at Last in 2017. Its 11 tracks showcase dynamic compositions that delve into themes of nature and the human condition. Each song intertwines acoustic roots with ambient guitars, varied rhythms and a prominent string section.

FIINN meanwhile also features Charlotte Friesen and Michael Dunn alongside the Baron brothers, and the five of them together create haunting melodies, clever rhythms, and unique soundscapes.

FIINN was initially formed in 2014 when it put out a folk-inspired EP. In 2016, they changed musical direction and decided to write music that they enjoyed playing, not particularly paying attention to a specific genre. This inspired their EP Godsend in 2017 and then later the full-length album Try Me in 2021

FIINN, featuring siblings Daniel, John, and Matt Baron alongside Charlotte Friesen and Michael Dunn, perform in Manitou next month.

Now FIINN are excited to be releasing the Already Gone album this coming fall with a collection of songs written with some vulnerability in mind.

Some of the biggest influences in FI-INN's music come from another local band, Royal Canoe, but they have a wide variety of musical influences behind their sound.

"Most of our EP songs are riddled with existential metaphors, historical references and references to landmarks such as the infamous Red River," noted Daniel, who added that a change was in the works for Try Me with a shift in focus to writing music that reflected personal experience. That album's songs were written prior to COVID-19's appearance in the world.

"It wasn't really by design the album has that theme, it just came together that way," said Matt. "A lot of the songs cover that internal monologue.

"These are really fun songs to hear live, if you can imagine, and really fun to play," he concluded.

Proceeds from the Manitou show will go towards the maintenance and upkeep of the opera house.

The concert begins at 7 p.m. The doors and cash bar open at 6 p.m.

Tickets are $25 for adults and $15 for 17 and under. You can call or text 204-242-4287 for tickets.

Run & Walk to Remember raises over $15,000

By Lori Penner

The Curtis Klassen Memorial Fund (CKMF) enjoyed a record turnout at last Saturday's Run & Walk to Remember.

Over 180 people participated in the 5k and 10k events, which co-organizer Eric Hildebrand says is a big jump from last year's numbers.

"It's just fantastic to see this kind of increase from previous years. I can't be sure, but I have a feeling that the release of the documentary Altona might have played a part in encouraging more people to get on board. It brought back a lot of awareness about what took place, and how this event came to be.'

The weather was balmy and beautiful as participants made their way down the trails and roadways in the community, past crowds of cheering fans, many ringing cowbells and holding signs.

"There was a slight breeze, which was great for the runners," Hildebrand notes.

They were from all walks of life, from dedicated athletes and families with strollers to seniors, youngsters, and groups walking or running together for a cause.

At the end of the day, everyone gathered back at the Altona Centennial Park for a barbecue supplied by Sun Valley Co-op, with bouncers on hand to occupy the little ones.

"We're very thankful for their support this year, and over all the years," Hildebrand says. "As a committee, we are extremely grateful for the community support we receive for this event, from the phenomenal support from local businesses, as well as our volunteers. We couldn't host this community event/fundraiser without everyone involved."

Between registrations and donations, Saturday's fundraiser generated just over $15,000. This pushed the CKMF to surpass a total of $100,000 raised over the last decade and re-in-

A flow-through fund of the Altona Community Foundation, the CKMF was established by a group of Klassen's friends. It supports young athletes in the Altona area by helping to fill the needs of grassroots sports organizations and even a few community projects.

This year, they donated funds to the Altona Youth Soccer Program to allow them to purchase a set of jerseys for another team.

"By us being able to facilitate that, they can keep their registration fees affordable," Hildebrand says.

"Every cent that we bring in, we put it right back into the community," he adds. "Wherever there are needs, we are eager and excited to be part of those needs."

Smaller donations go out to other groups such as Altona Minor Baseball, who are helping some families with registration fees.

Community-based events and projects are also included in their giving, such as the play structure at the Centennial Park and the Altona Memory Garden.

The CKMF also offers two annual high school scholarships at W.C. Miller Collegiate for students pursuing post-secondary education with some interest in sports.

Canada's police system is one-of-a-kind

Did you know that Canada has a policing system that's unique in the world? There are three distinct policing levels: municipal, provincial and federal. Each level is crucial in maintaining law and order within the country.

1. Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP)

At the federal level, the RCMP serves as Canada's national police force. The RCMP is unique in its jurisdiction, operating at the international, federal, provincial and municipal levels. Federal police officers are responsible for enforcing federal laws, investigating crimes of national significance and providing specialized services such as border security, counterterrorism and organized crime investigations.

2. Provincial police

Provincial police services operate at the regional level, providing law enforcement in specific provinces or territories. While some provinces have dedicated police forces, such as the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) or the Sûreté du Québec in Quebec, others rely on contract policing with the RCMP. Provincial police officers enforce both provincial laws and regulations, as well as federal laws within their jurisdiction.

3. Municipal police

At the municipal level, police services are provided by local law enforcement agencies. These agencies are responsible for policing within specific cities, towns or municipalities. Officers at this level handle various duties, including responding to emergency calls, conducting investigations and patrolling neighbourhoods to ensure public safety.

During National Police Week, from May 12 to 18, educate your-self on how the police operate in your area and how they work collaboratively to ensure the safety and security of Canadians across the country.

Winkler Aquatic Centre opens next Friday

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Aquatic Centre opens the doors on the 2024 season next Opening day for the pool is Friday, May 24, and Winkler's recreation programmer Meg Dias says things have been busy behind the scenes getting everything ready for it.

The facility welcomes Brooke Thiessen and Dean Klassen as the new co-aquatic programmers this sum-

"They've been head guards and been with the aquatic centre for a number of years now, so we're really excited and they're really excited to take over the helm," Dias says.

The pair will be backed by an experienced team of lifeguards.

"We were really lucky ... we have a lot of returning guards, which is fantastic," Dias says, noting a former pool ticket clerk is moving into the guard position, and a few of the other newcomers come to the role with lifeguard experience elsewhere.

Swimming lesson registration takes place this week (Winkler and RM of Stanley residents can sign up online at cityofwinkler.ca on Wednesday; registration then opens up for everyone else on Thursday) and, as always, it's expected the prime spots will fill

"They have filled up quickly in the past, but there always are openingsthe tough part is not everybody always gets the time or the week that they want," Dias says. "But we're doing our best to make sure that everybody is accommodated."

After a busy season of upgrades last vear—2023 saw the installation of the new speed slides and a new water heater—there's nothing on the pool's to-do list as far as capital projects go for this summer.

"In terms of the maintenance side of things, we don't have anything big happening this year," Dias says. "We've done some of the cosmetic touch-ups that we do leading up to pool season, but nothing major.'

The pool's pair of old hot tubs remain closed, though they have not yet been removed. Those were shut down last summer after years of finicky operation and will not be replaced.

On the scheduling front, Dias says they have a great lineup of programs on tap for the months ahead.

"We'll have Adapt the Fun [for children with special needs] as we have in past years, Senior Swim we will still be offering. We're looking at offering a couple of extra Parent and Tot swims, potentially on the weekends."

The aquatic centre also received a grant that will allow them to host special swim sessions for participants from Gateway Resources as well as free sessions for families who might not otherwise have the opportunity to access the pool.

Swim Smart Day is also scheduled to take place during National Drowning Prevention Week (July 21-27).

Stay tuned to the Winkler Aquatic Centre's social media pages for details on these and other upcoming programs and special events.

SUMMER DAY CAMP

In addition to the various pool programs, Dias notes that the City of Winkler Recreation Department is also offering nine weeks of themed summer day camp fun this year for kids age 6-9 and 10-12 in July and August.

The camps will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and include games, sports, swimming, art, music, and more at a price of $125 per week per child ($100 per four-day week due to holidays).

"There's a few of them that are almost at capacity, which is awesome," Dias says, urging families to book their slot sooner rather than later to avoid disappointment.

Weekly themes include Canadiana, Outdoor Explorer, Triple Treat, Water World, Summer Olympics, Art-Venture, Colour Challenge, Game Show Mania, and a season-ending Mash Up

Morden police board finalizes new five-year strategic plan

By Lorne Stelmach

A new strategic plan is helping to guide policing in Morden over the next five years.

The Morden police board recently finalized the plan following an extensive process that included a community survey as well as consultations with various community stakehold-

Police board chairperson Lee Bassett saw the process as playing a role in helping the Morden Police Service to be both proactive as well as reactive in the community.

"We can't lose sight of the fact the police always need to be reactive. There are always going to be emergencies where they need to respond quickly and efficiently and effectively," he said. "[But] there's some exercises or roles that they can carry out to prevent crime."

The planning process began with a public survey in February 2023 that was followed by community consultations late last year.

The community conversations were done in a roundtable format in which

Gov. general art award a "crowning achievement" for artist with Plum Coulee roots

By Lori Penner

As a little girl, Grace Nickel spent many happy hours exploring the trees surrounding her parents' farm near Plum Coulee.

"It was really just a wind shelter, so all the trees had been planted," the award-winning ceramic artist recalls.

"But to me, it was a magical forest, where I had all sorts of imaginative play. In a busy home with six children, this was my happy place. It shows the power of the child's mind. When I tap into all those early influences now, I can see how so much of the things I create started there."

She learned the value of hard work on that farm, where sustainability wasn't a new concept—it was a way of life.

"We had a huge garden. Everything was produced on those 10 acres. It just was what it was."

Her father also owned an excavating company, but still found time for creativity.

"He had sketchbooks lying around and did a lot of drawing. He was also a musician. As a child, it seemed quite natural."

Nickel's parents encouraged her interest in drawing.

"They bought me books, and I graduated to pastels. There weren't any formal art classes in school at the time."

Her earliest fascination with clay began at the site of her father's excavations.

"I watched him dig and became aware of the beauty of Manitoba clay," she recalls. "The texture and the movement. Those things stay with you. Those were the early beginnings."

Ceramic artist Grace Nickel is coming home to Plum Coulee this summer for an exhibition of her work at the Prairieview Elevator Museum.

After high school, Nickel travelled across Europe, and decided to become an art teacher.

"I didn't have the confidence to think I could be a professional artist. I loved school, so I started with a bachelor of education program in fine arts, but I soon realized that was not for me. Sculpture was not on campus at that time, so I chose ceramics and became enamored of it. There was quite a dedicated bunch of us, who practically lived at the studio."

After college, her love of clay continued, but it was a long road. Nickel eventually found herself working at the Winnipeg Art Gallery, in their studio program.

"When I left the gallery, I always had teaching jobs in the arts, including a mentoring program for emerging women artists. But I always made sure I found the time and energy for the studio."

When the University of Manitoba implemented a master's in fine arts degree, Nickel spent two years in Nova Scotia for her graduate studies. It was here that her love of trees and her craft united.

"I was inspired by Point Pleasant Park. It had been hit by Hurricane Juan three years earlier, and 70,000 trees had been damaged. The people there were still devastated. I walked in the park and knew immediately that was going to be the focus of my thesis."

The result was a tribute to the park called, Devastatus Rememorari. The porcelain forms are pieced together in sections, symbolizing nature's attempt to mend and rebuild the ravaged trees. The installation went on to become a permanent collection at the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia.

Nickel's 40-year art career is focused on sculptural ceramics and installation. She has gone on to claim numerous awards in competition and her work can be found in permanent collections in Japan, China, and Taiwan. She's also had numerous solo exhibitions in Canada including at the Winnipeg Art Gallery and at Altona's Gallery in the Park.

Last year, the ceramic artist was awarded Canada's most prestigious distinction in fine crafts: the Saidye Bronfman Award, one of eight prizes in the Governor General's Awards in Visual and Media Arts.

Nickel received a $25,000 prize and a bronze medallion and her contribution to contemporary visual arts was honoured by the Canadian Museum of History.

"For a woman of my generation to become a professional artist and a full professor at a university is a big accomplishment," Nickel reflected. "And now, receiving a GGArts is a crowning achievement. I'm also pretty sure that I'm the only Saidye Bronfman Award recipient who grew up in Plum Coulee, Manitoba, the same rural community as Saidye Bronfman herself. This is something I'm extremely proud of."

Today, Nickel continues to teach participants were asked what they felt were the biggest challenges in regards to public safety and what policing values they wanted to see from the local department.

"We need to understand what the community needs in order to develop our strategic plan," said Bassett, who emphasized their aim was to gather a better understanding of the needs of the community.

They place a lot of importance on working collaboratively with the police in setting priorities and objectives.

"It really did take a lot of work, and it did take a lot of input from the community to put the plan together," Bassett said.

The mission set out in the plan is to reduce crime and provide a safe environment through strategic policing and strong community partnerships. It outlines four key areas: keep our streets safe through education and enforcement, promote community policing and partnerships, enforce drug laws, and sustain our workforce.

Bassett said they feel they have a number of good things happening such as the Citizens on Patrol Program as well as the community resource officer who goes into schools and meets with students and staff.

"There was a resounding theme that we heard, and that was the need to promote community policing and partnerships. We did make that a priority," she said. "One way that we're doing that is by having a community resource officer, and that is Jeff Forster, who has been really instrumental in keeping the Morden Police Service in touch with our youth and also with working with other community organizations."

Bassett noted they have also placed priority on ongoing monitoring of what is happening and being done.

"We are receiving some great feedback and starting to see some results," she suggested. "One other thing we have done with this strategic plan is we've made sure to establish metrics that tell us how we're doing and if we should be doing better and if we are on the right track."

Bassett encouraged anyone who is interested to get involved even by participating in any of the regular meetings of the police board, with the next one set for June 20 at 3 p.m. at the Morden Civic Centre.

As well, the key points of the strategic plan can be found on the Morden Police Service website.

"Anyone can come to our meetings to see what we are doing and to have their voice heard," she said. "The community has a say in what they need from our police service. Our chief is very receptive to the community's comments, suggestions. We want to hear from people.

"It's not just the police service's responsibility. It's all our responsibility to keep our community safe."

t inspired | Ask the money lady

Dear Money Lady,

I need to purchase a new car this year and I am not sure if I should invest in an EV, Hybrid, or regular vehicle. What do you think? Thanks, Gord.

Hi Gord, this is a great question and one I think a lot of Canadians are wondering since the Canadian government mandated that all lightduty vehicle sales be 100% electric by 2035. The problem for me is the current costs of EV's. Now that vehicle pricing is truly the second highest investment purchase a Canadian will make next to buying a home, is it worth it to invest in electric vehicles now? Maybe not.

Most vehicles have a life span of 10+ years and to get the most value out of your purchase, you should plan to keep it this long. The problem is, we are just a little too far off the 2035 electric switch over date and the current vehicle manufacturers really aren't offering a great selection of electric vehicles at competitive pricing yet. Yes, we are provided with rebate offers from every province to encourage us to "buy-in," but we still have the issues with the scarcity of EV charging stations, especially in rural areas. The best-selling car today is actually not a car at all, rather it remains a light truck. The Ford F-150, Chevrolet 1500 and Dodge Ram 1500 series of light trucks (or pickup's) are still our North American bestsellers. Today, electric vehicles sales only make up approximately 10% annually and most automakers rely heavily on the generous profits realized from their light-truck sales to fund their EV development efforts. Toyota, the world's largest automaker, has announced that for every EV produced, they can make 10 or more hybrids with much less impact to the earth than the energy required to mine and extract precious rare earth minerals from the ground which is what constitutes the average EV bat-

The Canadian government now offers up to $5,000 in rebates towards the purchase of a fully electric or plug-in hybrid electric vehicle. It's a good idea to check the Government of Canada website under "Incentives for Zero-Emission Vehicles" since not all vehicles qualify for this full rebate and there will be variations to the amount if you plan to lease your new purchase. To be honest, in my opinion, you can still get a better deal on a regular gas vehicle today, but if your budget allows, it would be a good idea to consider a hybrid option. Plan to keep this vehicle for at least 10 years to get your money's worth out of it. Remember that most new car sale markups start at 7%-8% and dealerships are more willing to haggle on their pricing at the end of the month. Aim for a 3%-4% reduction in the list price of the vehicle and be prepared to walk if the sales manager won't bend. Guaranteed, if they know you are a serious buyer, they will give in to this reduction in pricing, (a hint from one of my friends who is been in the new car sales business for over 20 years).

If you are leasing your vehicle and writing off the costs as a business expense, then definitely consider an EV or hybrid. This will give you the opportunity to "try it out" since you will most likely be trading in your vehicle after 3-5 years anyway. One thing you need to watch out for - if this is your 2nd or 3rd lease, make sure the car dealer discharges the old lease and sets up a new one. I have seen many times in the past, when we have pulled credit bureaus for clients wanting loans at the bank, that they have had multiple leases registered to their name. This is a banking "no-no" and can definitely hinder your prospects of acquiring future credit. Each lease must be clearly discharged, not transferred. By transferring a lease to a new vehicle, it creates two lease payments on a client's credit report, one for the old vehicle (not discharged but still registered with the VIN number) and one for the new vehicle. Be careful.

"I should have known that was going to be my fate because I always loved to argue. I will forever be in debt to the Western Canadian Wheat Growers Association that welcomed me to that table with zero experience. They let me cut my teeth on the policy issues that we were working so hard at, and represent that organization. I had the enthusiasm they needed."

Over the years, Jolly-Nagel has tirelessly advocated for the industry, emphasizing the importance of promoting its practices. She highlights the need to bridge the gap between farmers and the public, dispelling misconceptions and building trust through open dialogue and shared val-

She admits that she grossly underestimated the importance of building relationships with the public and showing them how much farmers truly care about the land and the environment and the safety of our food system.

"I took for granted that because my family has been farming some of the same land for more than 100 years, that was enough to gain their trust. We thought we were always going to have their trust. And we just walked out of the tractor one day and wondered why doesn't anybody trust us? And we didn't realize that we needed to be building a relationship with the public first."

So much of the confusion stems from public perception. Or rather, misconception.

"Most consumers picture farms as that little red barn and farming practices from 50 years ago. And we have not done enough of the effort to bring them back up to the present day. Agriculture has gone through tremendous technological change. From precision planting to drone technology. It's the most scientifically advanced industry on the globe. The public doesn't know how we're farming, but even more, they don't know who is farming."

Misinformation runs rampant, she says.

"We haven't done a good job explaining not only what we do in agriculture, but who is doing it. We just never took a lot of time to fill in that gap.

"Canadians are now two generations removed from the family farm. From having relatives on the farm, to losing the common sense of how food is grown. If they're only getting their information online, what are they finding? It's not good. If they look up meat, it's bad. GMOs are the worst. Pesticides. Sugar is bad. Chemicals are bad. Everything they read online about farming is bad."

How do we change it? Sharing your values, Jolly-Nagel says, is three to five times more effective with building trust than sharing scientific facts and expertise.

"We don't take a minute during the day to think about the values that are behind every decision we make on the farm. I would suggest if you're using fungicides, and you don't know why, you shouldn't use them. If you really haven't taken a minute about why you use pesticides and why choose to grow genetically modified canola, then maybe that privilege won't be there forever. And I realized if I don't really know why I need access to fertilizer, that privilege can go away real fast."

When those horror stories hit the media, producers are forced to react to them.

Jolly-Nagel says farmers need to get to a place where they can promote the industry rather than always being on the defence.

"Start sharing stories about life on the farm. I spend much of my time speaking to an urban audience and sharing the good news stories and I encourage you to do the same."

By sharing stories of life on the farm and championing the values that guide their decisions, Jolly-Nagel believes they can shape a brighter future for agriculture and inspire the next generation of proud farmers.

"We all agree it's important that the next generation is proud of the agricultural industry and a part of that heritage is acknowledging the role that farmers need to play. We must share the good news stories and put our values first. Those tools that we have available to us are a privilege. And if you're using one of those tools today, on your farm, think about it as a privilege so that the next generation will continue to be able to use it. When I think of all the tools that can be taken away, it's a pretty bleak future for the next generation."

Plan for your future farm needs.

I can help you develop a customized financial and retirement strategy that meets your needs today and builds a solid foundation for your future.

A rocky start to the season for Orioles, Bisons

By Lorne Stelmach

The Pembina Valley Orioles and Altona Bisons both opened their MJBL seasons with a pair of losses last weekend.

The opening day showcase Saturday in Winnipeg saw the Orioles fall 4-1 to the Carillon Sultans and 15-11 to the Interlake Blue Jays, while the Bisons lost 11-3 to the Blue Jays and 12-0 to the Sultans.

Hits were 7-3 in Carillon's favour against the Orioles, who had Owen Goertzen on the mound; he allowed four runs on six hits while striking out eight over four innings.

It was a wide open affair between Pembina Valley and Interlake with the hits 15-13 for the Orioles, who opened with five runs in first inning. Interlake countered with three in the second and five in the fourth and sealed it with a grand slam home run in the seventh inning.

Mike Heppner took the loss with

U15 Central Energy earns two big wins over the weekend

By Ty Dilello

On May 12, the U15 Central Energy team earned two big victories in the Manitoba Premier Softball League (MSPL) standings when they dismantled Smitty's Terminators in both games of their double-header by 11-2 and 20-0 counts.

With the wins, U15 Central Energy moves to second place in the MPSL standings with a record of 3-1

"Hot bats and great pitching today made us tough to beat," said U15 Central Energy coach Kevin Perrin. "We are a skilled group of athletes who are fun to coach, and I'm excited to see how far we can take this team. The season has started off with a bang, going three wins and one loss to start, with only giving up two hits in the game we lost."

In the first game, Mya Richard collected three hits in three at-bats as Central Energy cruised to an 11-2 win. She tripled in the second inning, doubled in the first inning, and singled in the fourth inning. Central Energy scored seven runs on multiple hits in the second inning on the way to victory. And Shyanne Goertzen earned the win for the team as she only gave up four hits and two runs over three and one-third innings, striking out seven and walking two people.

Game 2 of the doubleheader saw Ella Conrad collect three hits in three at-bats as Central Energy won again by a 20-0 scoreline. Conrad doubled and singled in the first inning and added another single in the third inning. Addison Nikkel earned the win for Central Energy on the mound as the lefty gave up one hit and zero runs over four innings, striking out eight and walking none.

The U15 Central Energy team is off to Calgary this weekend for the May Long Invitational Tournament and looks forward to competing against some strong competition. They will return to MPSL action on May 25 with a doubleheader (12 noon and 2 p.m.) against the Interlake Phillies at Quarry Park in Stonewall.

The U13 Central Energy team was also in action over the weekend as they dropped both games of its doubleheader with Smitty's Terminators by 8-7 scores in both games.

In the first game of the doubleheader, Kelsey Dyck led the Energy with two hits in an 8-7 loss. Central Energy trailed early but took the lead in the top of the sixth. Lindsay French grounded out, scoring three runs, to give Central the lead, 7-6. The Terminators scored on a passed ball, which helped Smitty's tie the game at seven in the bottom of the sixth and go on to eventual victory. Dyck led things off in the circle for Central Energy. The left-handed pitcher gave up four hits and two runs over three innings, striking out five and walking none.

In the second game, Central Energy once again outhit Smitty's eight to four but again fell 8-7 in the final score. Hailey Baldwin led Central Energy with two hits in three at-bats. They fought back in the game after falling behind by five runs in the first inning, but the comeback fell just short. Collins Vrooman started the game for Central Energy in the circle and gave up two hits and seven runs (five earned) over three innings, striking out five and walking six. Brady Wiebe pitched three innings, allowing two hits and accumulating three strikeouts.

The U13 Central Energy falls to last place in the MPSL standings now with a record of 1-5. The U13 squad is back in action with a game at 2 p.m. on June 1 at Stonewall's Quarry Park against the Interlake Phillies

First of three speedway race weekends coming up May 25-26

By Lorne Stelmach

The roar of the engines will soon be heard at Dead Horse Creek Speedway, and the Valley Motorsports Association is excited to get racing underway again at the track west of Morden.

"We're still pretty new at this ... but we've got one season under our belt, and we learned a lot. We're going to keep at it and continue finding ways to improve it," said president Chris Unrau. "There was pent up demand here for a long time. There's a lot of gearheads in this area, and motorsports is hugely popular ... people need a place for it."

The association formed as a notfor-profit corporation in 2023 and took over operation of the former ALH Motor Speedway. It's made up of a group of grassroots enthusiasts whose mission is to advance motorsports for the enjoyment of the region.

A lot of their efforts last summer focused on revitalizing the track, starting with reshaping and resurfacing it, and there are more improvements being made this year.

"We've put quite a bit of time and energy and effort into further improvements to the facility," said Unrau.

"We've got some permanent lighting that's getting installed. Little Morden Service has come forward to sponsor a lap leaderboard so we can see how many laps remaining in each race and what position are the top four at any time, so that's really exciting.

"We're going to have a large LED video screen this year," he added. "We're also hoping to move towards some kind of a streaming operation where we would get the races streamed live online ... I'm not quite sure when we will get there, but that is a goal."

Three weekend special events are on tap for 2024.

The McNaught Cadillac Cup will be May 25-26 and will include the attendance of the Northern Late Model Racing Association with a top level of late model competitors.

"That's the best of the best in the region ... the top late model drivers from North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Manitoba," said Unrau. "It will bring the top competitors and the top high-powered cars. I can't stress with enough excitement how big of a deal it is to have the NLRA come here to our track."

The GVE Deere Run will go July 5-6 featuring the Watermelon Cup modified special as well as the Brad Wall Memorial.

Closing out the season then in conjunction with the Corn and Apple Festival is the Proven Seed King of the Corn Aug. 23-24.

"It's very exciting. We had such a great response from the community last year that we decided to expand a little bit to three race weekends," said Unrau, noting they are grateful to have all three races fully sponsored.

"The response from the community has been fabulous, and what we hear is that there's a lot of people planning to come out to these events this year."

Tickets are on sale at the Gardenland Co-op convenience store locations as well as online. Unrau encouraged people to get their tickets early.

"The sense I get in the community is that there are a lot of people who want to come out."

Winkler Flyers 2-1 at Centennial Cup

By Ashleigh Viveiros

The Winkler Flyers are 2-1 in the opening games of the Centennial Cup.

The team punched their ticket to the national competition by winning their first MJHL title in 26 years last month, downing the Steinbach Pistons in four straight games.

In their first game of the national championship last Thursday, the Flyers downed the Sioux Lookout Bombers 4-2

Dalton Andrew scored all four of Winkler's goals to lead the Flyers to victory and earn himself a player of the game nod.

Malachi Klassen made 19 saves in net as the Flyers outshot the Bombers 48-19.

Game two put them up against the Melfort Mustangs Saturday. The close match saw Winkler up 2-0 after 20 minutes thanks to goals from Jakob

Jones and Brody Beauchemin.

That lead became a tie in the second period when the Mustangs scored three to Winkler's one (Connor Jensen)

Both teams found the mark twice in the third. Winkler's came courtesy of Andrew and Zach Nicolas to force what proved to be a fruitless overtime

The shootout went the Mustangs' way to give them the win 6-5.

On Monday, the Flyers squared off against the Oakville Blades.

A scoreless opening frame was followed by Winkler scoring two unanswered goals in the second, courtesy of Andrew and James Richards.

Avery Anderson and Nicolas McKee fired home two empty-net goals in the game's final minutes to give Winkler the win 4-0.

Klassen got the shutout in net, turning away all 24 shots he faced. His teammates sent 29 the other way.

Sotheran leads Winterhawks to WHL finals

By Kieran Reimer

Sanford's Carter Sotheran is causing a stir in the playoffs of the Western Hockey League.

The 2023 fifth-round draft pick for the Philadelphia Flyers has been a dominant presence on the Portland Winterhawks' defence throughout the entire season. Sotheran is a key reason the team will play in the WHL Championship.

Standing tall at 6'3, 198 pounds on the blue line, Sotheran can be found making plays all over the ice while having a sense of when to jump into a play or stay back.

In his second season with the club, the 18-year-old defenceman scored 13 goals and 27 assists in 66 regular-season games and is continuing to improve in the playoffs, where he has 4 goals and 7 assists in 15 games and a plus-20 rating.

"My skating has gotten a lot better, and a lot smoother," said Sotheran following a 2-1 double overtime victory over the Prince George Cougars that sent the Winterhawks to the WHL Championship.

"Just confidence, playing with the puck, having poise, stuff like that. That's my biggest improvement since the off-season."

Sotheran's Winterhawks features one of the most stacked rosters in the WHL, with multiple 100-point players and seven NHL draft picks.

In the regular season, the Winterhawks finished first in the WHL's U.S. Division and third in the league overall.

During the playoffs, they swept the first two rounds against the Victoria Royals and Everett Silvertips before eliminating the Cougars in six games in the semi-finals.

Sotheran points to his team's tight bond, which for some Winterhawks players dates back to the 2019-20 season when some of their current players joined the team.

"It's easy just knowing each other and having each other's backs," said Sotheran. "The depth we have is pretty crazy the way anyone can go out there and do their thing and put pucks in the back of the net, play good defence, and it's been kicking for us all season. It's been a good year, and everything is coming together full circle."

The Winterhawks are one of the more Manitoba-heavy teams in WHL with four players from across the province.

Winnipeg's Alex Thompson and Russell's Ryder Thompson play alongside Sotheran on the backend, while Birtle's Aiden Sotas has been absent from the forward group all season with injury.

For them, representing their province is something they are embracing as Moose Jaw features only one Manitoban in Dominion City's Denton Mateychuk.

"It's a huge honour," said Sotheran.
"Being from Manitoba, not a lot of guys are left (in the playoffs) so just trying to represent my town and my province is a huge thing for me and hopefully we can take it all the way."

The Winterhawks now head to Moose Jaw, SK for games three and four where they will aim to even up the best-of-seven series.

Carter Sotheran

Games three and four will go Tuesday and Wednesday night at 9 p.m. central time from Moose Jaw Events Centre.

The winner of the series will represent the WHL in the 104th Memorial Cup in Saginaw, MI at the end of the month.

Mateychuk leads Warriors to finals

By Kieran Reimer

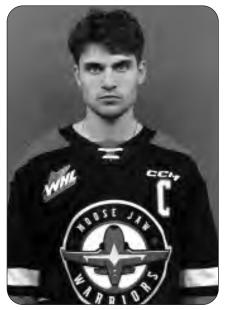

Dominion City's Denton Mateychuk is off to the Western Hockey League Championship. His Moose Jaw Warriors defeated the Saskatoon Blades in overtime of game seven by a score of 3-2 Wednesday night.

Lynden Lakovic was the overtime hero for Moose Jaw scoring the game winner only 36 seconds into overtime on a backhand shot from the goal line that fooled Blades goaltender Evan Gardner.

The Warriors are now set for a bestof-seven series against the Portland Winterhawks with a WHL Championship and a trip to Saginaw, MI for the 104th Memorial Cup on the line.

Mateychuk has been a force for the Warriors' blueline all playoffs scoring 8 goals and 19 assists for 27 points. He is tied with teammate Jagger Firkus for the WHL's playoff points lead. His contributions have helped the Warriors to series wins over the Brandon Wheat Kings, Swift Current Broncos, and now the Saskatoon Blades.

He is also the front-runner for WHL Playoffs Most Valuable Player accord-

Morden Home Hardware continues to grow

Morden's Home Hardware is moving forward with not only new ownership but also plans for

It's been steady growth for the business, especially since it moved from its old location on the west side of Morden to Loren Drive on the east side of the city five years ago.

further expansion.

New owner and general manager Richard Dyck stepped into the role after previous owners David and Liz Janzen decided to move back to Belize to do mission work.

"We saw a good opportunity to purchase the business," Dyck said of the partners involved in taking over the business.

"The former location was just a hardware store and then it expanded to this location and became a building centre as well," he said, noting it was a significant expansion and step up. "It was big for them to do this expansion ... there was one other lumber yard in the community ... but it's always good to have competition to have a second option for people."

It was a good opportunity for Dyck, who grew up on a dairy farm south of Winkler and has been in the construction industry for 22 years.

"I've partnered with good people to build a good business, and it has led to purchasing other companies in the area that we need ... we saw this as a good fit."

Home Hardware of course continues to offer a complete range of hardware lines as well as a garden centre, but the building centre has become an increasingly important part of the business.

"It's everything you need for home renovation or construction, and we now also have the lumber side, which we are already expanding," Dyck said. "We doubled our yard since we took ownership in January.

"We are also increasing our inventory levels both in the store and on the yard with the lumber," he added. "We do have plans for expanding the warehouse space on the yard ... that's very important to have lumber and materials stored indoors.

"We want to be the go-to lumber yard and the go-to store for everyone. We want to have what people need."

He sees a positive outlook for the continued growth of Home Hardware in Morden.

"We've had a good few months since we took ownership. It's been a really good start," said Dyck, who oversees 28 employees. "We're feeling it's getting busier.

"Customer service is number one priority. That's the key ... we need to show the care that we want to serve people," he said. "And it's a prime location because you're just on the outskirts of Morden, so we have space to expand ... we are working on it."
